manifesto has been furnished by Rosecrans, with a request for its publication by the California press. House of Representatives,

WASHINGTON, May 28, 1882. To my Constituants:

I speak with unreserved frankness of the public interests of great moment, local and national, that moment, local and national, that induced me to sacrifice my personal feelings and place my name at your disposal to lead a forlorn hope. In 1880 it was successful. Interests of still greater national magnitude make it my duty to ask you, in return, to disregard personal and local preferences for the common weal. Without much aid from the Associated Press, or aid from the Associated Press, or the newspapers, it will not be diffi-cult for you to conclude that my brief service, as your representative, brief service, as your representative, has been honest and faithful, and for my influence and standing with both parties in the House, it is safe to say your present representative is at least as high as any of his predecessors. On the question of Chinese immigration, the delegation from our coast all worked nobly, but I think it within the truth to say that I did more than all of them to see amendment providing that before any payment of money authorized by the bill the Presseent shall coamunicate to the governments of Great Britain France and the Netherlands, the action of this government, and request their co-operation in making full restitution to Japan.

Calkins requested an opportunity to submit a counter proposition, remarking, that as chairman of the committee on elections, he could not accept the proposition of the minority, as it was a reflection upon the report of the committee.

Representative Belford, of Colorado, rose to a point of order and remarked that he did not wish to be understood as favoring the acceptance of the proposition, and proposition of the composition of the composition of the contested election case of the dead-lock on the centested election case of Mackey-Dibble, were made in the House to-day.
